Ogilvie visits city in bid for support of income tax plan

By Dean Rebuffoni
Staff Writer

Governor Richard B. Ogilvie, bearing a message for the people of Illinois, paid a brief visit to Carbondale Monday afternoon.

The governor, who arrived by plane and appeared at a brief press conference at the SIU Airport, spoke on his proposed state income tax. He asked that the people "who pay most of the taxes in Illinois... make themselves heard—by telephone, by letter, by any means they can."

Ogilvie said that his whirlwind day-long flying tour of the state—one in which he planned visits to eight cities—was taken to "give every bit of help that I can to our Illinois legislators."

He said that his proposal for a 4 per cent state income tax was "vital to the future of the state," and that Illinois legislators, "with a very few exceptions," know that "our schools are in trouble in every part of the state."

The governor said that property taxes have reached "an all-time high," and added that "there is only one way open to us to keep these high taxes from getting even higher. The way to relief is through the income tax. It will also provide massive aid to schools."

Ogilvie cited several examples of how schools in the Carbondale area would benefit from his proposed plan, and added that the income tax would provide Carbondale with "over $240,000 in this fiscal year."

Gov. Ogilvie: "I think of even more importance to the students is that if we do not get an income tax... this would mean that there will be some rather substantial cuts in the budget for higher education. The fact is that this is one area that is most often referred to where substantial cuts can be made."

During the press conference, attended by about 30 people, the governor answered questions concerning his proposal for the first state income tax in Illinois history: On provisions for college students who work:

"Each student would receive an individual exemption of $1000, so (a student) would have to make in excess of $1000 before the tax would apply. I think of even more importance to the students, however, is that if we do not get an income tax in the dimensions that we are talking about, this would mean that there will be some rather substantial cuts in the budget for higher education. The fact is that this is one area that is most often referred to where substantial cuts can be made."

Summer quarter fee deadline set

Gus Bode
Gus says he has been on a hunger strike since the beginning of the year but he hasn't been protesting anything.

Undergraduate fees for summer quarter must be paid at the Bursar's Office by 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Registration for the quarter will be cancelled if the fees are not paid at this time, according to Barney K. Browning, assistant to the registrar.

Closed minds all-University problem: Davis

Speaking at the annual student government recognition dinner in Ballroom B of the University Center Monday night, Thomas Davis, assistant professor of English, declared "we've all failed; students, faculty and administrators."

"If only students had failed the ideal of the University, then the faculty could stand self-righteously by while dissenting students were busted," he said, "if only the faculty had failed, then you could send us packing and opt for the boob tube; and if only the administration had failed, then we could take to the streets and shut the place down."

"But we've all failed," Davis said, "and if we don't get together, then somebody will take over our university—and we'll deserve it."

Davis criticized students who make demands which are "non-negotiable."

"Any list of demands that begins with the words 'non-negotiable' turns me off," he said.

"I see the spectre of LBJ and Nixon, and hear the tiresome reiteration of the same old non-negotiable demands, while hundreds of people are getting blown to pieces."

"On the other hand," he continued, "I see the closed minds of self-righteous administrators of faculty, or students—who are on such an ego trip that truth is theirs alone, and only they can see the New Jerusalem."

As an example of this "self-righteousness," Davis cited the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) "Joint Statement on Rights and Freedoms of Students."

He pointed out that the document has been recommended for adoption by the Faculty Council, the Student Senate, the local AAUP chapter, and a special committee on "Freedom and Dissent within the University."

Alluding to Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar, Davis said the "highest administrative official on this campus" had been quoted as saying "he could not in good conscience accept it (the joint statement)."

He said the official was also recently quoted as saying he could "accept the statement, but not in its entirety."

"It's like saying I accept my paycheck, but not all of it, or like saying I'll teach my classes, but only when I want to—it is difficult to see how this attitude is any different from a list of student demands which is clearly and candidly labeled 'non-negotiable,'" said Davis.

"Administrators," he said, "in my opinion, do not simply administer policies promulgated on high, or cater exclusively to their own private vision as to what's best for the university."

"Either this is a community, and the community's wishes are honored, or it is a totalitarian structure, and if that is the case, let us all be candid enough to admit it."

Davis is chairman of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) Watchdog Committee on Student Rights. As such, he was responsible for bringing an ACLU suit against the University over the banning of The Big Muddy Gazette, an underground publication.

Davis' name was not presented to the Board of Trustees for promotion, at the May meeting, and he says he will leave the University if it does not come up in June.

Van Atta accepts job at Ball State

Robert Van Atta, professor of chemistry at SIU and a member of the chemistry department faculty for 15 years, has accepted an appointment as department head at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind.

Van Atta said he will stay at the Carbondale campus through July to complete a research project. He will assume his new position Sept. 1.

A native of Ada, Okla., Van Atta was an instructor at Pennsylvania State University and chemistry department chairman at Ohio Northern University before joining the SIU faculty in 1954. His research, sponsored by the Research Corporation, National Science Foundation, Office of Water Resources Research and other agencies, has centered on instrument design, polarography and organic reaction kinetics.

He has degrees from Ohio Northern, Purdue University and Pennsylvania State. He is married to the former Mary Ellen Koons of Green Springs, Ohio. They have three children.

Sit-in, hunger strike ended

By Nathan Jones Staff Writer

The student senator who started a hunger strike against women's hours after resigning from his seat at last week's Senate meeting, ended that strike 19 hours after it began.

The strike was being carried out at a sit-in demonstration on the lawn of President Delyte W. Morris's home.

Carl Courtner, former Small Group Housing Senator, said that he ended his strike because violent elements were moving into the non-violent sit-in.

Some people showed up with Molotov cocktails, Courtner said, and "I was afraid that it was going to be a repeat of Monday night when we almost lost control of the crowd."

Other senators agreed with Courtner and the sit-in officially ended at 4 p.m. Thursday when they left.

Student participants who had camped on the lawn across the street from Morris's home didn't leave the scene until Friday afternoon, however. They moved to a geodesic dome near the Lake-on-the-Campus and were still demonstrating Monday.

Courtner said his strike lost its impact when Pete Rozzell, student body vice-president, spoke to Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar and made a compromise over the hours issue.

According to Courtner the compromise states that women involved in the walkout against hours would only receive a letter of reprimand which would be sent to their parents.

The Student Senate can still act on the hours issue because last week's meeting was not adjourned, only recessed. The meeting was to be the last one this quarter.

Postmaster admits misuse of funds

BENTON, Ill. (AP)—Former Benton Postmaster Harold Fred Hollway pleaded guilty Monday to misappropriating more than $8,000 in federal funds.

Hollway also pleaded guilty to making a false statement in a cash book. He had claimed to have $10,000 in one postal account when in fact there was less than $2,000.

Judge William Jurgens of U.S. District Court deferred sentencing. Hollway requested probation.

Stains to write for Britannica

Howard J. Stains, associate professor of Zoology at SIU, has been asked by the Encyclopedia Britannica to write a 22,200 word article on Carnivora.

This project is to be one of several new major articles on broad topics not previously covered in such detail.

The article would probably not appear in the encyclopedia for more than a year, as Britannica has set the end of April, 1970 as the completion deadline.

Critical of praise

To the Daily Egyptian:

I believe a few comments are in order concerning an editorial in the May 21 issue of the Egyptian entitled "Black Praise is Warranted."

Don't lavish your praise upon us. I demand that the SIU hierarchy (after prodding by the state legislature), and the six blacks arrested a year ago get equal attention.

Fortunately, very little, but some violence, was necessary to achieve the token "advances" in athletics and academic circles that have made life bearable only in recent years. Blacks at SIU have not resorted to violence as long as other expeditious and satisfactory means were available.

Crippled mind?

To the Daily Egyptian:

In response to Mr. Al Capp's letter in the Egyptian, May 20, I should think it would be rather obvious to Mr. Capp that Mrs. Leonard was not speaking of his physical condition when she said he was a crippled little man. She was speaking of his mind, and the malicious things he wrote about her, based on a very brief letter, only go to prove her point.

Student has troubles

To the Daily Egyptian:

First, I received an ABS (unauthorized withdrawal from a course) instead of a B grade for GSC 201. Then, I didn't receive my class schedule for spring quarter and just recently I received a bill for $6.98 from the Textbook Service for a book I had turned in last quarter.

Besides all of this, I had an error in my tuition bill, and was fouled up when I dropped a course that the computer didn't want me to drop. To correct all of this, I have had to make repeated trips to the Bursar, Sectioning, Textbook Service, and the Registrar.

This kind of treatment has been happening to me since January, 1969, when I transferred to SIU, and I am being pushed to the limit of my patience. I am fully expecting not to receive my grades for this quarter, not to get my housing contract and not to receive my schedule for fall quarter. I also expect to get bills for books that I have returned and to have courses that I have dropped to be added and vice versa.

What is going on here? Could I be the only one that all this happens to? I am damned tired of this, and would like to state publicly that SIU had better watch its step from now on, or I'll unleash my awesome and unlimited fury against her. I may even pull the plug of the computer, and finally, Gus Bode had better watch his step too.

Hours unacceptable

To the Daily Egyptian:

As parents, we find the recommendations to modify women's hours as proposed by the SIU administration's "select committee" wholly unacceptable.

It is a plan devised by the administration to retain its unjust control over the student by exploiting what is commonly termed the "generation gap."

It is an obvious attempt by the 3-M company (Morris, MacVicar and Moulton) to slip its tentacles through the home and back around the student's neck under the guise of "parental discretion."

They are playing with the natural reluctance in parents to give up their hold on their children, a reluctance difficult enough to overcome without the interference of self-righteous administrative elitists.

They are using, in fact fostering, divisions between parent and student, while it should be a function of the University to heal these splits. In essence, the proposed plan makes the administration at once the enemy of both parent and student.

As parents of two girls and two boys, we call upon all fellow parents to reject the proposal and to demand the abolition of all discriminatory and arbitrary regulations that infringe upon students' rights as citizens of a free society.

Let it not be said in the future that we condoned, or cooperated in, the making of slaves of our children.

'Open mouth insert foot'

To the Daily Egyptian:

I, for one, thoroughly enjoyed Al Capp's brief sojourn to SIU. Much to my delight, his sane and level-headed approach returned to our campus in the form of a rejoinder to Mrs. Joseph Leonard and Mr. Richard B. Cook.

Mr. Capp's reply to Miss Koch, ooops! Mrs. Leonard, gives us something fairly meaty about which we botheaded youngsters can think. I feel certain that Mr. Capp inserted that particular paragraph, in which he so vindictively attacked Mrs. Leonard, to teach us a lesson: mudslinging is pure, unadulterated nonsense, and thus it accomplishes nothing, but to prove gross immaturity.

As to Mr. Capp's "credentials" for discoursing on such subjects as ghettos, warfare, student unrest, etc., I think his rejoinder to Mr. Cook clarifies his position, more than adequately. As the old saying goes, Mr. Cook, "open mouth, insert foot, etc., etc., etc."

Writer finds America still strange place

By Antero Pietila

It was a hot and humid afternoon in late September when a stranger came to Carbondale two years ago. He had been in America once before, but this was the first time he was anywhere west of Cleveland.

His presence in Carbondale was the sum of several coincidences: Had he not met a department chairman from SIU several years earlier, had he not written his letter of application before a certain party, he probably would have never come. Now he was in Carbondale, and today, almost two years later, I find it difficult to remember anything of that afternoon except that I fell asleep before 7 o'clock that night.

America is a strange country, a place where you soon begin wondering what keeps the union together. For a newsmen it is also a dangerous country because you easily fall in love with America, not necessarily as a nation but as a news story, the biggest story of our time aside from China.

Take your turns, meet foreign newsmen, and ask why they are here. I asked two Finnish journalists this question recently and the answer both of them gave was that "I don't want to leave this country yet."

One of those persons was the Washington correspondent of the Finnish Broadcasting Company, a hard-working newsmen who was offered a high executive position back home but who answered by saying he will stay in Washington or quit.

The other had been a correspondent in New York for Finland's largest daily. When the newspaper, because of devaluation at home and rising costs in America, was forced to close its bureau in that metropolis, he was ordered back. Rather than returning, he resigned, not only because his wife is a popular fashion model here but because he himself did not want to lose a good story, the continuous story of America.

The story of America is a story of a nation in a difficult process of social change. Carbondale may not be among the most rapidly changing places in the nation, but time and time again you are surprised to see how different it is from the town you came to two years ago.

During my first stay in America, in the summer of 1964, I visited Atlantic City during the Democratic National Convention and covered the riots in Harlem. The Democrats nominated Lyndon B. Johnson to bring peace to Vietnam. In the riot-torn Harlem even the most militant blacks still talked about equality.

Editor's note: Antero Pietila, a graduate student from Finland, has been commenting on international affairs in a series of articles published in the Egyptian during the past two years. In this last article before joining the reporting staff of the Baltimore Sun he discusses his experiences at SIU.

Lyndon Johnson lost his war, the black American is drifting toward reverse segregation. The gravest danger this nation is facing now, however, is the possibility of a new rise of anti-intellectualism which, in the frustration of the war and dissatisfaction over the conditions in big cities, could prove more destructive to society than anything SDS can achieve. After all, Vietnam was the sociologists' war and their beautiful game theories failed. It is difficult to see how the Rostows of the nation's best universities, who devised the tactics for Vietnam, could create, after their failures, any more credibility to their academic fields in people's minds than the military can after the great "strategic victories" of Khe Sanh and Hamburger Hill.

What may be a general anti-intellectual reaction toward egg-heads may have led to today's cry about "relevance" in education. To a certain extent, demands for change in academic programs are certainly legitimate. Personally, however, I have not been able to disassociate myself from a nagging suspicion that the demand of "relevancy" may lead to decisions comparable to that of the City Council of Newark, N.J.

The City Council, in its profound wisdom, recently ruled that it was "irrelevant" for the well-being of the more than 400,000 Newarkians to have a public library. So they withdrew funds from it.

If Philip Roth has written anything of importance since "Goodbye, Columbus" it was his plea for the Newark library in the editorial page of the New York Times. It was a beautifully written piece by a novelist to whom the very same library had meant so much in his youth.

In his article, Roth pointed out the many educational rules a public library has, how you will learn to respect property which is not "yours" or "other people's" but "public." In fact, he wrote about this experience also in "Goodbye, Columbus."

To continue the discussion about relevancy in education, there is a term in the Scandinavian languages that in English means nothing but which could and probably should be imported to this language as "ombudsman" was.

That term is "fack-idiot." It is used to describe persons whose academic records may be impeccable but who, in reality, are college-graduated know-nothings, people who know much about their limited special areas, but are otherwise intellectual illiterates. Nobody can argue that these people, mostly products of the immense demand for technocrats, did not receive "relevant" education. It only so happened that this "relevant" education produced "irrelevant" citizens.

For this reason I hope the General Studies program will be retained at SIU and that students who cannot pass a comprehensive general knowledge test (which, I hope, will be offered as an option) will continue to be resented. If they are, there will be hope that they will find something in their education that is beyond the current dispute about relevancy.

Another question I want to touch in this last article is the role of a foreign student at SIU. This is a population not too large perhaps, but still large enough to have a representative of its own in the Student Senate.

In the last elections there were two write-in candidates running for that office. Both of them received two votes. Working on a theory that both voted for themselves, they actually got one vote each.

The question of international education is so difficult I don't even try to discuss it here. The International Student Center at SIU has my full sympathy in its difficult work, which I do not want to criticize. It is the basic policy of the center toward various nationality groups that I must criticize.

During the past two years the center has encouraged all nationality groups to form their own organizations. The Nepalis have an organization of their own, so do the Arabs and so do many other nationalities. The greatest feat occurred when the center persuaded the Canadians to rally around Trudeau and form a group of their own. Complained one Canadian, "If I want to speak about Canada to other Canadians, what's the wisdom in my being here?"

Antero Pietila

... it is also a dangerous country because you easily fall in love with America, not necessarily as a nation but as a news story ...

Besides these official organizations, unofficial organizations meet in the University Center cafeteria, dormitories or houses, where students from a given country tend to live together. So there is a rich international subculture in Carbondale, so rich indeed that this writer knows of one foreign student who still after more than two years' stay at SIU, needs an interpreter.

He has succeeded in living here with his own nationals, eating his national dishes, speaking his native language and reading newspapers from home. Aside from American television programs, there is apparently little that makes his life here different from what it could be in his home country.

This student is an exception to the rule, of course. But there certainly is a tendency among different nationality groups to stick together and among foreign students in general to seek the company of other foreign students.

This is understandable in part. However, this kind of "living in America but not with Americans" often leads to the fostering of prejudices. Experiences are compared, criticism that is not always legitimate is voiced. It must be from this kind of institution of international prejudices that those leaders in many foreign countries who are American-trained, yet most anti-American in their attitudes, were graduated.

It may be nice to talk in Carbondale about how nice it was back home but the time could be spent more fruitfully with Americans, comparing cultures and seeking what is common rather than different. For although it may be ultimately impossible for a foreigner to understand America and its problems, at least he can develop an appreciation of both.

That, I think, is something foreign students can ideally learn. In this respect, the experiment the SIU Center for English as a Second Language is conducting in trying to find Americans interested in the culture and customs of their foreign roommates is as interesting as it is difficult.

Finally: For two years I have enjoyed a position any writer would envy in having the freedom to decide my topics myself and write without restrictions. My special thanks go to those staff members of the Daily Egyptian who have edited my copy. I hope I will find as understanding copy editors at the Sun. There is a special place in my heart also for Miss Diane Levine who was the first person to openly disagree with something I had written in the Egyptian. Happiness and peace!

Hours committee to complete report

By Theo J. Howard

The committee on women's hours met Wednesday to discuss the relevance of its recommendation to the almost complete statistical data which it has been gathering. Elynn Zimmerman, chairman of the committee, said that the data appears to be supporting the recommendations, as was expected.

The committee recommended last week that all undergraduate women age 18 and over have self-determined hours, and that those women under age 21 have parental consent.

The only deviation from the expected results, at this point, was in the results of questionnaires sent to all undergraduate women. Zimmerman said. Of the 1,400 that have been returned, a greater number of undergraduate women have expressed the opinion that first quarter freshmen should have hours, than those who feel they should not. This opinion is less liberal than the committee's recommendation.

Zimmerman said that Chancellor Robert MacVicar has expressed support for the committee's recommendation, and will recommend it to SIU President Morris, provided the completed statistical data bears it out.

The committee has suggested that the recommendation be put into effect on June 17, 1969. However, the recommendation will not be ruled upon until July 1, which is the original deadline date.

After reviewing the data, the committee went on to revise women's regulations regarding closing hours, overnight and sign-out procedures and violations.

The committee's report will be completed, compiled and presented to MacVicar during finals week.

Special honors student at 44

A generation gap hasn't stopped Dora Spinney, 44, of Sparta, from becoming one of 10 students at SIU tapped for the Department of History's first class of honor students.

The honors program is a highly selective one, open to junior-year students of superior scholastic achievement who show promise of outstanding capabilities in historical research.

Each honor student must complete a substantial piece of research and write a comprehensive paper on the subject. Miss Spinney has done her research project on "The National Bank Proposal of Alexander Hamilton."

A former secretary who "moonlighted" for several years as a cocktail room pianist, Miss Spinney said, "I didn't have the opportunity to go to college after I graduated from high school and always regretted it." In 1962 she decided to give up her job and start on a college degree which would qualify her for a teaching position.

Illness interrupted her studies for a time. She has held part-time secretarial jobs on the campus, and is high in her praise of the University student work program. "I couldn't make it without this program," she said.

For almost 10 years before becoming a college student, Miss Spinney worked for the Illinois Power Company in Sparta, the last two and a half years as secretary to the service area manager. Prior to that she had spent five and a half years as secretary at McDonnell-Douglas aircraft in St. Louis.

At present she holds a part-time job assisting John W. Allen, Southern Illinois author, historian and folklorist and former University Museum curator, in work on his latest book.

Miss Spinney's niece, Margaret June Harris of Le May, Mo., also is an SIU student, a President's Scholar with a 5.0 (straight A) scholastic grade point average during the winter quarter. She is a mathematics major, also planning to teach. "We hope to graduate together," Miss Spinney said.

Jim Simpson

What was the worst player deal ever made in the history of baseball? How about this one. In 1920 the Boston Red Sox sent a young player to the Yankees by the name of Babe Ruth. Many experts agree that was the most foolish deal of all-time.

Here are amazing similarities in the first games played in college basketball by two of the greatest players of all-time, Lew Alcindor and Wilt Chamberlain. Chamberlain played his first varsity college game Dec. 3, 1956 and Alcindor played his first college varsity game EXACTLY 10 years later to the day - Dec. 3, 1966. In their college debuts, Chamberlain and Alcindor each scored in the 50s, each missed exactly nine field goal attempts and each set a new school single-game scoring record in their first games.

Do you know there's a big league sports team on which the coach is younger than almost half his players? It's St. Louis of the National Hockey League whose coach, Scotty Bowman, is 35 years old. Some of the stars on the team are Jacques Plante who's 39, Glenn Hall, 37, Doug Harvey, 44, Al Arbour, 36 and Camille Henry, 36. The Blues are interesting to follow because they have the oldest players of any team in the history of professional sports.

I bet you didn't know that college graduates have a longer life expectancy - lower death rate and are living five years longer on the average than non-college men. The lower death rate of college men makes possible broader benefits and greater cash values in College Life policies. This certainly makes good sense, doesn't it?

Reds urged to boycott

PARIS (AP)—Followers of the powerful French Communist party were called upon Monday to boycott the June 15 runoff between Georges Pompidou and Alain Poper to succeed Charles de Gaulle in France's presidency.

This action made the election of 57-year-old former Premier Pompidou virtually sure. To have a serious chance of victory, Poper would need the whole-hearted backing of the Communist vote in the runoff between the two top men in Sunday's first round of balloting.

City Council to review fund increase request

The Carbondale City Council will review tonight a request for increased operating funds from the Employment and Resource Center.

The center, set up last year to aid low income citizens, requested $21,670 for the 1969-70 fiscal year. The Council, last month, approved the city budget with provision for a $10,000 center appropriation.

A report on the employment center's operation for 1968 was submitted to the Council at last week's informal meeting.

John Holmes, assistant to the coordinator of the University Services to Carbondale and Environs, presented the report.

Included in the center's request are funds for a new position of job developer and research analyst at a salary of $225 bi-weekly. Also proposed is the purchase of an automobile to be used by the employment center staff.

Carbondale Mayor David Keene said he is impressed with the work of the center and what it has done for Carbondale.

According to the report given to the City Council, the center processed 557 applicants, made 454 referrals and had 237 applicants placed in jobs. An estimate of the total annual income for the 159 full-time positions found was given as $667,800.

Keene said, "every dollar spent on the employment center will return to the city."

This town has to realize it must cure the problem of the ghetto. The employment center is one of the few agencies that can do this."

Not all the funds for the center come from the city, according to Holmes, who said the director's salary is paid through other sources.

The director was paid $500 a month for a nine-month period last year. Holmes said the center needs a full-time director.

The balance of the staff has been an assistant director, secretary, and Job Corps employee who also functioned as a secretary.

The proposed staff this year would include a job developer to follow-up on applications and secure data for further employment resource studies.

Keene said he feels that such a post is a necessity since experience has shown that the disadvantaged are sometimes reluctant to help themselves.

City Manager C. William Norman said Monday that money for the increased budget request would have to be found elsewhere in the city's operating funds.

A budgeted contingency fund would be exhausted by a two and one half per cent salary increase offered to city employees following recent grievances raised by city firemen.

The employment center's Board of Directors is expected to be present at tonight's meeting.

City appeals to state for street-road funds

By Dave Cooper

The City of Carbondale has finally appealed to the state government for money to provide more and better streets and highways within the city, according to a city report.

Although Carbondale has recognized its responsibility to its citizens and to the University by working to find solutions to the street and highway problems, the city needs state and federal aid, the report continues.

Carbondale has made plans and initiated programs which are essential but which cannot be completed without help from the state and federal governments.

The report, by the Department of Public Works of Carbondale, written in February for Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, stated that SIU accounts for about one-fourth of all automobile trips within the city. (A trip is defined as the movement of a vehicle from one point to another.)

The report predicted the total trips to SIU's campus from within the city in 1985 will almost equal all trips in Carbondale that were made in 1955. It is anticipated that the total trips in Carbondale will increase from 46,000 in 1955 to 209,000 in 1985.

The state has done little on roads in the Carbondale area since 1955, according to the report. Excluding the North-South Couple, which was awarded late in 1968 and is now under construction, the state has spent only $65,000 on streets and highways in Carbondale within the past 14 years, the report went on.

In 1965, the state resurfaced Main St. to its existing width at a cost of about $35,000 and later installed intersection lights and signals for about $30,000.

During the same 14-year period, Carbondale, utilizing its Motor Fuel Tax, General Tax, bonding power and contributions from SIU, has spent $2,036,000 on streets and highways.

This amount has gone mostly for improvements to Walnut, Main, Wall, Mill, Poplar, Willow, East and Oak streets, Oakland and Grand avenues and Lewis Lane.

The amount spent by the city is greater than 30 times that spent by the state.

What, then, is still needed in Carbondale?

According to the study, directed by Carbondale's Director of Public Works, Bill J. Schwegman, there are four main projects in which the city requests support from the Governor.

(1) Carbondale would like to obtain a commitment from the Governor that the east end of the East-West Couple will be placed under contract during 1969.

(2) It is hoped that the Governor will give the support of his office in obtaining a favorable Illinois Commerce Commission ruling which will force the Illinois Central Railroad to stop blocking the Walnut St. crossing. Without such a favorable ruling on this blockage, the East-West Couple won't work.

"One way in which this requirement could be met is if the train would stop on the north side of Main St. with the Illinois Central officials renovating the old depot," Schwegman said.

The east end of the East-West Couple is scheduled for construction during 1969 at an estimated cost of $1,200,000.

(3) The City would also like to get a commitment from the Governor to build, during

Independent choice

Sometime later in 1969, the people of West Irian, formerly Netherlands New Guinea, will determine if West Irian remains part of Indonesia or seeks independence.

1970, the west end of the East-West Couple, including the straightening of the Iris Ave. connection and additional turning lanes on Illinois Route 13.

(4) Carbondale requests the Governor's support toward obtaining direct state appropriations or appropriations through impaction legislation which would be used to construct direct access routes to SIU from the west and the east.

The report suggests that the state quickly acquire the remaining right-of-way required to construct a west access road from Illinois Route 13 South adjacent to Little Crab Orchard Creek to the 1-and 2nd recently acquired by the University. A right-of-way for an eastern approach should also be acquired now, the report continues.

Such an access road would begin at the intersection of Mill Street and South Illinois Avenue, both of which will be reconstructed as part of the North-South Couple, and proceed east under the Illinois Central Railroad, providing an underpass large enough to accommodate both the city street and University loop road.

From here it would proceed east along Hester to Wall St., then across open country to Lewis Lane, across more open country to the Giant City Blacktop, then north to Illinois Route 13. An additional connection north could be provided at Lewis Lane.

The North-South Couple was approved late in 1968, approximately 10 years after it was proposed. The contract price was about $741,000.

"This couple should be most of the way completed by the fall of 1969 and finished during next spring," Schwegman said.

"Carbondale and SIU should combine forces and go to the state legislature and request the needed money," Schwegman said. "These plans can't be completed until the city receives the money because Carbondale can't carry any more of the financial burden."

During this time large quantities of aquathol solution will be put into the lake to combat the growth of weeds, he said. The manufacturer of the toxic solution recommends that the facilities be closed during application and for a short time thereafter.

Thomas asked for cooperation during the treatment period. The facilities will be available for use during the regular hours again on Tuesday, June 17.

Four proposals to solve racial problems

By Larry J. Gaudney

The United States' image as the leading democratic world power is critically re-evaluated and often denounced when foreign nations of the world receive news of racial strife and tribulation here, a Thailand government officer says.

Kiat Chaiphaphat, a graduate student in government at SIU, said the Thai people consider the United States the most powerful and progressive country in the world. However, when they receive news about the racial and other domestic problems of the United States they become confused, he asserted. In bewilderment they wonder how a country with no internal peace can promote international peace.

Chaiphaphat, 29, is a provincial officer of the Community Development Department Ministry of Interior in Thailand. He received a bachelor of arts degree in political science from Chulalongkorn University and a degree in law from Thammasart University. He is working toward a master of arts degree in government at SIU.

The Thai people have sympathy toward the Americans, Chaiphaphat declared, and sympathy is the key to solving the racial problems in the United States. He said militant objectives and methods will not solve the racial problems because violence breeds only more violence.

Any individual or group that uses destructive militant methods to acquire their selfish objectives should be severely punished, Chaiphaphat said.

Racial problems are very complicated to solve because of the numerous elements involved, Chaiphaphat continued. He said each race has a distinctive culture and tradition, and it is often difficult to change traditional patterns. But he briefly outlined four proposals to solve racial problems in the United States.

Delta Chi raises $400 for Heart Association

Delta Chi Fraternity plans to make its basketball marathon an annual event after the financial success it had with the first such event on May 23 and 24.

The marathon, held at Mardale Shopping Center with the purpose of raising money for the Illinois Heart Association, produced $400 during the 30 hours the men of Delta Chi played basketball.

The fraternity was given an award for their outstanding service to the Illinois Heart Association. The award was presented by Frank Bleyer, chairman of the Carbondale Heart Fund.

Eiffel Tower grows

The Eiffel Tower, made of bolted iron girders and standing 984 feet high, plus a 20-foot TV antenna, grows seven inches on a sunny summer day.

LOVE

To make money? It's easy! Sell old furniture with Daily Egyptian Classified Action Ads.

The first proposal calls for more education.

"From my observations," Chaiphaphat said, "it appears that many of the youth participating in violent demonstrations in the United States are not well educated and are unable to think for themselves, thus they are persuaded to conform with the crowd."

By educating these youth many of the racial problems can be solved, he asserted. He said education means much more than just formal training, for youth must learn how society operates and some of the values that society regards as guidelines.

The second proposal demands an extensive program to eliminate poverty. In a progressive technological and scientific country, Chaiphaphat said, poverty breeds hatred and injustice among racial groups. By eliminating poverty, one of the most difficult tasks any country can undertake, many racial problems would be solved, he declared.

The third proposal calls for strict law enforcement and severe punishment. He said freedom of dissent ends when it inflicts harm upon someone else. Unless there is severe punishment for violating the laws, the laws have no function. Freedom is a concept that ignorant masses ruin and unless it is preserved by harsh discipline it will diminish, he said.

The final proposal advocates mixed-marriages and communal apartment-type living. Chaiphaphat said mixed-marriages are very common in Thailand. The personal adjustment demanded by mixed-marriages will solve many racial problems, he declared.

He said various races living in large modern apartments would provide an atmosphere that stimulates love and sympathy—two required elements to solve the racial problems.

If the United States cannot solve its internal problems it may follow a path that leads to destruction similar to the fall of the Babylonian Empire, he declared.

After the conclusion of a two year program of study at SIU Chaiphaphat plans to return to Thailand and become chief advisor to the governor of Nonthaburi, a province in Thailand.

Equalitarian society demands radical changes: McGarry

By Jorge Navarro

During the months of Spring, the news has been dominated by student radicals. The radical student has been everywhere; taking over buildings at Harvard, planting flowers in a Berkeley lot, sitting on the football field at Tulane during an ROTC drill, and the publishing of newspaper in Carbondale—the "Big Muddy Gazette."

Kevin McGarry, a sophomore from Deerfield majoring in philosophy, is one of the editors of the BMG, where he is identified in the masthead as "Youth Chauvinist Kevin." He also writes the record reviews for the underground paper.

McGarry believes the publication of the "Big Muddy Gazette" and a subsequent suit brought against the SIU administration for banning sale of the paper on campus, were the two main moves undertaken by radical students at SIU this spring.

The women's hours demonstrations had radical support, but McGarry points out their leadership was divided between liberal, radical, and moderate students.

McGarry, who calls himself a radical leftist, said that he believes that "the building of a just and equalitarian society can only be achieved if there is radical change in our ways of thinking, change that would go a lot deeper than to the external symptoms of our problems, and instead would penetrate to the roots of our social diseases."

These root causes of the social problems are, according to McGarry, the present economic and social systems in America.

If that change takes place, what kind of society will be the one built by radicals?

"I want a community of people where it would be possible for everybody to develop in any manner he or she chooses to, a community where everybody would have the interest of the whole as their personal interest." This is not possible in today's America, he adds.

As McGarry speaks, he moves continuously in the disarray around his house. There are posters of past and future marches. Pictures of leftist leaders of a score of countries, radical magazines and newspapers, pamphlets and leaflets from every conceivable cause, from grapepickers to draft resisters.

"Meetings and discussions bore me, that's just jive (talk), like all these people, they only argue with each other on what to do," he said, pointing to the literature sprawled all over the house.

"I want to do things where the small victories could be felt in the way people live."

It is for that reason that McGarry is going to work this summer for the National Office of Students for a Democratic Society as an organizer in one of Chicago's working class neighborhoods. Organizers for SDS receive no pay, McGarry said, but he added that money was at present the least of his concerns.

Some of the other members of the Carbondale SDS chapter will go home, some to work in factories in their home towns. But at least one, Roger Spanner, SDS liaison with the SIU administration, expressed interest in working for the SDS Regional Office in Seattle, Wash. A small group will remain in Carbondale during the summer.

For those who think that the first days of June will put an end to all that has been going on in universities this year, McGarry offers no hope.

"We will be back next year," he concluded.

Four-quarter physics program

Over the past two years the Department of Physics has developed a four-quarter program in beginning physics, according to John R. Zimmerman, department chairman.

This development he said has been due to a steadily increasing number of students enrolled in the courses offered by the department. Special attention has been paid to the two general physics sequences, and now either sequence may be initiated in any of the four academic quarters.

The physics faculty feels that liberal arts and pre-professional students will be interested in the Physics 206-207 (a, b, c) sequence and engineering and physics majors in the Physics 211 (a, b, c) sequence. Either sequence, if initiated in the summer quarter, may be continued in any subsequent quarter because each of the three courses of the sequence is offered during every quarter of the regular academic year.

In addition, "Sound, Heat, and Light" (Physics 206-207b) and "Electricity and Magnetism" (Physics 211c) are being offered during the summer quarter. An optional fourth course for either sequence is Physics 300, an "Introduction to Modern Physics." In keeping with the four-quarter program in beginning physics, this course is available throughout the year.

Zimmerman said, further information may be obtained by contacting the Department of Physics.

Alpha Phi's name officers

Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity has elected new officers. They are:

Leonard Maggio, president, a junior from Rockford; Ed Trzaskus, first vice president; Ron Presson, second vice president, a junior from Collinsville; Russ Gurtine, treasurer; Budman Dzadyk, recording secretary; and Al McQueen, correspondence secretary.

Other officers are Ken Goldman, alumni secretary, freshman from Chesterfield; Randy Konkel, sergeant-at-

Spinach top dish

Nutrition experts at the National Academy of Sciences say spinach tops nearly all vegetables in all-round nutritive values. It contains the most iron and vitamin A of all popular vegetables, plus above-average doses of vitamin C and calcium.

SIU netters dominate Memorial Day tourney; now look toward NCAA championships

By Dave Cooper
Staff Writer

SIU's tennis players tuned up for this month's NCAA championships by dominating the 15th annual Memorial Day Tournament Saturday at Evansville, Ind.

Saluki teammates Bill Lloyd and Macky Dominguez reached the singles finals with Lloyd coming out on top 3-6, 6-1, 6-3. Dominguez was also the runner-up in this tournament in 1967.

Then these same SIU netters teamed up to take the Aaron may quit if he gets 3000th hit

NEW YORK (AP)—There's good reason for the Atlanta Braves to be concerned about Hank Aaron's hitting even though the slugging outfielder is closing in on the National League batting lead with a .360 average.

Aaron has said he may retire at the end of this season if he gets into the select circle of those who have accumulated 3,000 career hits. He already has 59 safeties in 1969 for a career aggregate of 2,851. Aaron tied Ted Williams for fifth place on the career home run list by walloping his 521st Sunday.

Aaron moved to within only four points of the batting leader, Cleon Jones of the New York Mets. The latter slipped 14 points to .364 in last week's games by collecting only four hits in 17 times at bats.

doubles championship 6-2, 6-3.

Coach Dick LeFevre said he was pleased with the fine performances of the Southern players. LeFevre said Fritz Gildemeister, Graham Snook, Chris Greendale and Ray Briscoe will join Lloyd and Dominguez at the NCAA tournament June 16-21 at Princeton, N.J.

How well Southern fares in the NCAA depends on the draw, LeFevre said. "If the draw goes right we could finish in the top 10," LeFevre expects the University of Southern California to be the team to beat.

The draw in the Memorial Day tourney was good for the SIU netters, but they eventually began eliminating each other.

Dominguez won his semifinal match over Gildemeister, taking the first set 6-1 and was ahead 4-0 in the second set when Gildemeister defaulted due to illness. Gildemeister reached the semifinals after knocking off Snook 9-7, 6-3.

Lloyd advanced to the finals by beating former Saluki Mike Sprengelmeyer 6-4, 6-4 in the semis. Lloyd gained a semifinal berth by eliminating Greendale 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

Foul Balls win softball crown

The Foul Balls won the 16-inch intramural softball crown by crushing the Ugly 20-3 Wednesday. The Foul Balls put the championship game out of reach with a 12-run fifth inning. The Foul Balls advanced to the finals of the tourney by whipping My Wonders 9-8 and Linda Vista Willards 14-3.

After winning district tourney

Baseballers set for World Series

By Barb Lashans
Staff Writer

A very proud Joe Lutz, SIU baseball coach, sat in his office in the Arena late Monday afternoon reminiscing about District Four tournament play which the Salukis won by beating Ball State 4-3 last weekend in Minneapolis, Minn.

It was the second straight year that the Salukis picked off top honors in the three-game series, giving them the right to represent District Four in the College World Series at Omaha, Neb., June 13-19.

Southern will meet Massachusetts, District One winner, June 14 at 5:30 p.m.

Enroute to the title, the Salukis reaped its final two season losses to Ball State, humiliating the Cardinals 15-6 in a game packed with nine Southern home runs.

Minnesota, number two-ranked team in the nation, and Big Ten winner, hit the dust 4-3 in an 11 inning contest in second round tourney action.

It was the two independents, SIU and Ball State, that squared off for the title. Jerry Bond's solo homer in the seventh inning followed by SIU's efforts in the ninth in squelching a Cardinal rally led to the return trip to Omaha by a 4-3 score.

Smiling sheepishly, Lutz looked up from his many congratulatory letters and telegrams to comment on tournament action. "By and large it was a team effort. All the boys put out when it was needed.

"Pitching performances by Skip Pitlock, Jerry Paetzhold and Steve Webber were pleasant surprises," Lutz added.

Pitlock, a two-time loser to Ball State less than 10 days ago, was the winner in the title game against Ball State. Striking out 14 Cardinals, Pitlock surpassed the Saluki season strikeout record of 100 with 105.

Paetzhold won his 10th of the season, holding the Golden Gophers of Minnesota to three runs on eight hits. Webber relieved Bob Ash in the 15-6 rout of Ball State in the series' first game.

"The most pleasant victory of course had to be the final game and the title," Coach Lutz said, "but I think that the most satisfying victory would have to be the 4-3 comeback win over Minnesota.

"Individually, of course, Bond's triple and home run have to be cited as key tournaments plays," Coach Lutz added, "and Bill Clark's clutch catch in the ninth inning of the title game kept a Ball State run from scoring."

Terry Brumfield, the Salukis second baseman, established an NCAA tournament record, both district and national, with three home runs and a record mark of 12 total bases.

"Terry must have grown ten feet tall to the opponents after those home runs," Lutz laughed.

Citing Saluki players for tourney play Lutz added, "We can't forget Randy Coker, Saluki catcher, for his steady influence behind the plate and his dry sense of humor that kept the boys going. Or Bill Stein, shortstop, for his continuing fine play and hitting, or the consistent hitting and playmaking of firstbaseman Barry O'Sullivan or of the steady performances of outfielders Mike Rogodzinski and Bob Blakely.

"It was an outstanding series and we had favorable playing conditions that helped us out tremendously," Lutz concluded, as he went back to reports studying the teams he and his squad would face in the College World Series, June 13-19.

On tourney team

Salukis place seven

Seven of the nine starting SIU baseball players were named to the District Four tournament teams Saturday in Minneapolis, Minn.

Selected were: pitchers, Skip Pitlock and Jerry Paetzhold; catcher, Randy Coker; first baseman, Barry O'Sullivan; shortstop, Bill Stein; leftfielder Mike Rogodzinski; and center-fielder Jerry Bond.

Only the University of Minnesota placed players on the all-tourney team. Named from Minnesota were: Bob Schaefer, second baseman; Noel Jenke, rightfielder; and Bill Kindall, third-baseman.

No players were named from Ball State, District Four runner-up, or from Ohio University.

"This is quite an unusual honor for any one team," Joe Lutz, SIU baseball coach, said, "but again it shows the strength of our baseball team and our ability to represent District Four in the College World Series."

Football exhibition slate released

NEW YORK (AP)—Professional football has booked its largest number of preseason interleague games in 1969 in preparation for the regular playing merger, which goes into effect the following year.

This year's exhibition schedule, released Monday, shows 33 interleague games between clubs in the American Football League and the National Football League on the 74-game slate.

In 23 preseason interleague games in 1968, the AFL teams held a 13-10 edge. In 1967, the first year of such competition, the NFL teams won 13 of 16 games.

The schedule gets underway this year on Aug. 1 with the New York Jets, the Super Bowl champions, taking on the College All-Stars in Chicago.

In addition to the 33 interleague games, there will be 11 between AFL and 30 between NFL clubs. Green Bay is the only team which does not have an interleague game.

We may have goofed!

We were going to give this Mustang away free. . .

... to a summer resident of Stevenson Arms, but there is a possibility that we might have been accused of running a lottery. So the boss said, "Sell it to someone in Stevenson Arms on or before July 2, for as little as a $10 bill if you have to, but get rid of it!" and the boss is always right so we do it.
